KAUPAPA

Ko te Kahikatea he rākau tū ki te repo engari, kāhore e matotoru te tū kei te repo kē hoki ngā pakiaha. No reira, kawhakaritea e Tāne me whiriwhiri ngā pakiakapakari ana te tū torohika ana. E ai ki, te kōrero nei "Me Uru Kahikatea". Tērā pea, keite repo tātou e te iwi mā tēnei kōrero tātou e ara ake.

The Kahikatea prefers swampy ground, but stability is impaired by this unstable root environment. Therefore, Tane ordained that their root systems should intertwine to ensure stability. Thus, the saying "Me Uru Kahikatea". If we are standing on shaky ground, then this proverb is our guide.

The kahikatea is a symbol of strength and stature, it reminds us that it is not the individual, but the common goal for collective benefit that is important. It also reminds us that we are stronger when we stand together.

"He toi whakairo, he mana tangata."

Where there is artistic excellence, there is human dignity.
